GROUND OFS OF APPEAL FOR CASE 3SA90091

1. These Grounds Of Appeal relate to a Judgment handed down (and dated) the 14th July, 2015, with the order sealed dated the 6th of August 2015. It is not proposed to rehearse in detail the history of the case that ultimately was a claim in Defamation by the two Claimants.
2. It is, as part of this Appeal, intended to apply for a stay pending the Appeal.
3. It is pleaded by, and on behalf of, the Claimants in respect of this Appeal that the learned Judge erred in law in the manner more particularly outlined below and materially misunderstood (with respect) some of the salient facts outlined to him at trial, referring to them in the judgment in such a manner that those facts, or some material facts, have been significantly misrepresented.
4. The effect upon the Appellants has been prejudicial in so far as a fair account has not been recorded of the facts as outlined at trial and in disclosure.
5. It is the Claimant's case that the law as to defamation has been incorrectly and/or inappropriately applied and, had it been applied correctly, the learned Judge would have been obliged or bound to reach a wholly different conclusion.
6. In terms of factual inaccuracies, and by way of example only, the learned Judge refers at paragraph 12 (page 3) to the fact that allegedly the Claimants 'protested vigorously' and, as a result, allegedly the school 'excluded all their children.' The fact is that the Claimants only protested in this manner following the expulsion of their children from the school. This is a material misrepresentation of the facts putting the Claimants in a bad light without any justification, and contrary to the evidence and the verifiable facts in this case.
7. As a further example of factual inaccuracy, likely to have a material effect upon the judgment of both parties, at paragraph 19 (page 4) the learned Judge uses the phrase 'immediately before he boarded the flight home.' This was not the case. It was once they had arrived at the airport, but nevertheless in excess of two hours before boarding the aircraft.

8. By way of further example (and these examples should not in any way be regarded as exhaustive), at paragraph 41 (page 9), the Judge suggests that the Appellants had used the term 'mobbing threats', which misrepresented what they had in fact previously stated. They referred to 'mobbing' but never at any stage to 'mobbing threats' that is significantly different use of language.
9. The conclusion at paragraph 47 (page 10) to the effect that early exchanges are nothing more than 'forthright in expression' disregards both the content of those exchanges and the peripheral circumstances where the Appellants were subject to a barrage of incitement and clear instructions and advice to others to the effect, in these exact terms, that the Appellants could 'not be trusted.' These actions and statements go to the heart of the Appellants' Appeal and in disregarding them, or devaluing their significance, the Judge has failed to apply the correct law to the correct and relevant facts.
10. Further, in the same paragraph 47, the learned Judge errs in law in suggesting it is not the Court's task to evaluate two different views. To fail to do so is to fail to evaluate the credibility of the respective witnesses generally in order to reach a conclusion as to the credibility of their evidence generally.
11. Though at paragraph 53, the learned Judge concludes that the First Defendant's evidence as to his location and restrictions 'on electronic communication' means he was unable to reply to the Claimants, this totally and inexplicably disregards the many tweets online, which is conceded were made, and which therefore make the Judge's conclusion on this material point entirely unsustainable.
12. The Judge failed to give credence, or give sufficient weight or indeed any significance, to the phrase describing the Appellants as 'a couple of malevolent trolls.'
13. At paragraph 93, the Judge suggests that the Appellants were intolerant as to the use of what he himself refers to as a 'private blog.' But, with respect, the Judge fails to recognize that the Appellants rely upon the fact that they have been collectively and unjustifiably maligned and defamed and it is that to which they object, and upon which basis this Claim was founded.
14. It is accordingly respectfully submitted by the Appellants that the learned Judge has erred in failing to recognize the words spoken by the Defendants, the context in which those words were used, the effect of any other party seeing and/or reading those words, as well as the detrimental effect upon the Appellants or either of them.

15. More particularly, the Judge fails at paragraph 96 to recognize and identify the defamation of the Appellants by the clear (mis) diagnosis of them by the Defendants or either of them to the effect that the Second Appellant, according to the Second Defendant, had a 'borderline personality disorder'.
16. Further, though the learned Judge concludes to the contrary, he errs in suggesting that there were no examples of statements by Dr Byng referring to the Appellants, or either of them. Even at trial, the Witness himself conceded that he accepts some responsibility for statements referred to above to the effect that the Second Defendant was saying in unequivocal, but entirely misleading and unsubstantiated, terms that the Appellants or either of them had mental health issues. These statements were both untrue and scurrilous and the learned Judge ought to have recognized that this was a clear example of defamation and that the undercurrent of hostility on the part of the Defendants was further corroborative evidence of their malice, an aspect, with due respect, entirely and unjustifiably overlooked by the Judge.
17. The Judge in his judgment has failed to set out in detail, and with sufficient clarity, his conclusion as to the Statements upon which the Appellants rely to support their case. The Judge has erred in law in failing to evaluate these essential pre-requisites of this Claim.
18. Further, at paragraph 128 (page 28) the learned Judge turns his attention to the submissions and more specifically, the issue of publication, and concludes (with no proper or adequate foundation or basis) that it was somehow unlikely that, by way of re-tweet or otherwise, a significant number of other parties would read what was said for the first time.
19. The learned Judge speculates on the number of readers without the benefit of any expert evidence to contradict the Appellants' own evidence on this point. It was wholly unjust as a matter of law and fact to conclude that publication was not provable in the circumstances outlined. The learned Judge was addressing the question as one of mere conjecture rather than by application of legal principles and judicial notice and the proper definition of publication and its application to publication on the internet.
20. These various, malicious, untrue and scurrilous Statements were made in the public domain intended for the public or a part of the public to read and any notion that there was no publication is wholly irrational and forms an essential element of this Appeal. Further, in his judgment the learned Judge claims that his conclusions were not contested. Court documents will show the extent to which matters are thus misrepresented.

21. The conclusion at paragraph 93 (page 41) to the effect that the First Defendant, during the period of February 27th 2012 till 8th November, 2012, had not victimized or seriously denigrated the Appellants wholly ignores the fact that there were numerous examples in both parties' disclosure during the course of which such statements had indeed been communicated by the Defendant, including references to further communications by the 1st Defendant to journalistic "big hitters", which examples were requested by the learned judge but never supplied.
22. Though the learned Judge considers the Defence of Justification and accepts it is not made out in full (see paragraph 219 at page 46) he then purports to consider the Defence of Qualified Privilege. It is asserted that the learned Judge has wrongly applied the legal definition of Qualified Privilege and the Statements made over a period of time by the Defendants cannot conceivably be defended on that basis.
23. At Paragraph 231, the Judge addresses the question of malice, relying upon the case cited on the Defendants' behalf but incorrectly applying the law in failing to recognize the clear desire of the Defendants to injure the Appellants' reputations. It was never a question of carelessness (see sub paragraph (iv) (at page 50) but a malicious intent to cause loss of good name on the part of the Appellants or either of them.
24. The Appellants fully understand that the learned Judge is entitled to evaluate the evidence of all the witnesses. However, the learned Judge has failed to address matters in such a manner as to recognize and take into account the clear fact that the Defendants have on various occasions, during the trial, committed perjury. This was provable by reference pre-existing disclosure in the case which evidence the Judge failed to take into account. This rendered the decision of the Judge to be contrary to the evidence and therefore, perverse. By way of example only, Dr Richard Byng stated that he had waited for two days in his Witness Statement, whilst at trial he had to admit that events took place on the same day.
25. On another occasion, the same witness made Statements relating to the 2nd Claimant's mother that were then shown to be inconsistent with evidence presented at trial.
26. Despite the Second Defendant claiming that her only desire was to ask others not to discuss her son's stay with the Appellants, disclosure clearly established that the motive on the part of the Defendants was more sinister and specifically designed to destroy the Claimants and their reputation.

27. By way of yet further example, the First Defendant claimed that he had put the Appellants' names into his spam folder, in order to prove he had not blocked their email addresses. It was proved at trial that this was not the case.

28. The Appellants rely upon the fact that quotations that were online and accessible have been misquoted,

(a) One post, which the judgment states has been read "in full" by the learned judge and has been online since 2011 to date:

'Does Alicia not know then, about how "Thetis Mercurio" has demonstrated what can really only be described as grooming behaviour towards our child? How can we call it otherwise when "Thetis Mercurio" made so many advances towards her, with healing offers of help to re-engage her with school, even sending out her son to us with the message that he came really only to talk to our daughter about his wonderful school, in the country.

(b) Quote from Defence (para 37)

'[The Second Defendant] has demonstrated what can really only be described as grooming behaviour towards our child[.] How can we call it otherwise when [the Second Defendant] made so many advances towards her.'

It was demonstrated at trial that the above 'tampered' quote was not the actual quote when counsel for the Defendants asked the 2nd Defendant to read it out in its incorrect form during examination and the First Appellant highlighted the discrepancy.

(c) By tampering with the punctuation to remove that part of the sentence, the use of the word "grooming" has been completely misrepresented, suggestive of sexual grooming. The word grooming cannot in every context be assumed to refer to sexual grooming as against, for instance, brainwashing.

29. The learned judge has not acknowledged, and in fact denied, the cult meaning of the word 'groom', in the context of Steiner education- clearly stated in the same post as follows:

'The anonymous critic displayed the same seductive grooming types of behaviour that we have had to document at the school and the public mobbing was full of the same xenophobic projections that the school dished out.'

- 30. This denial of the cult context of the word "grooming", through evidence tampering, has been used as the justification of all the male fides of the Defendants, being referred to in total on eighteen occasions in the judgment.
- 31. The Appellants submit that there has been a fundamental breach of Article 6 of Human Rights Act – A right to a fair trial. The Hearing was not fair or balanced, and the refusal to re-instate the covert harassment claims was made on the basis that this harassment would be properly looked at in terms of the background for defamation.
- 32. Further, the Appellants rely upon a breach of Article 10 - a right to freedom of speech and expression. The Appellants' right to protest and free expression, in particular, as publishers, has been seriously undermined by this judgment.
- 33. The learned judge has erred in leaving defamatory Statements concerning the Claimants, their children, and the Landmark Titirangi Settlement at odds with the public record and which were publicly known before the First Defendant re-published the same on his Quackometer website.
- 34. The Judge fails to accept and/or recognise that the Appellants were merely and most clearly responding to the vitriolic assertions concerning them made by the Defendants both overtly and covertly. To conclude that there was no malice is to ignore the background, the spreading of rumour, the incitement and the male fides of the Defendants or either of them. It was inappropriate to ignore a history of harassment by the Defendants.
- 35. In brief, the learned Judge has misdirected himself as to the legal meaning of qualified privilege and in inaccurately stating facts (of which only a few are referred to above by way of example) he has as a result reached a conclusion that is at total variance with the law and these particular facts, effectively turning the case against the Claimants and making them into defendants in a manner completely at odds with Gatley.
- 36. The Appellants seek permission to Appeal and a stay of execution in respect of the costs.
